

Construction of a new $20 million complex for Utah County and state officials in Provo will begin this December.

Starting date set for $20 million Provo complex

Four-story state regional office building, along with a four-story county administration building, parking complex, will assist in turning the county courthouse back over to the courts, according to Commissioner Gary J. Anderson. The project will renovate the existing Utah County Courthouse to provide new facilities for the state District and Circuit Court systems. The project is entirely financed by a private development, architectural and construction team, to be leased to the County and State," said Anderson. The project will provide these offices "with the opportunity to do something beneficial for the taxpayers of Utah County and at the same time," increase the efficiency and delivery of service to the citizens of the valley," Anderson said. The private development, architectural and construction team that has been awarded the $20 million project is the Boyer Company from Salt Lake City. The idea for the project began ten years ago. The state of Utah has its agencies spread throughout the entire County and is in critical need of consolidation and more space, said Anderson. "Utah County is in much the same position and things have become much worse over the last couple of years." The need for space and three other factors emerged to set the stage for the proposed project, he said. The interest rates on money are lower than they have been in many years, the bond market is presently very strong and healthy, and the state supreme court recently ruled that counties could now use alternative financing mechanisms previously unavailable to them. The project will be financed through a bond program under which the state and county will lease the buildings from bond holders. "It will take about 20 to 25 years to complete the payments," said Anderson. "We are really saving the taxpayers a lot of money in the long run," he said, referring to the need for the buildings and the current low interest rates.

Vaccine policy; BYU without one

By SHELLEY L. MCMURDIE

Although national health advisory groups have recommended that all colleges and universities require incoming students be vaccinated against communicable diseases, BYU doesn't have such a policy. "We don't have an overall policy now, but if we saw a need for a broad spectrum policy, we would enact one," said Brent Harker, assistant director of BYU Public Communications. So far this year, approximately 3,921 cases of measles have been reported across the country, compared with approximately 1,800 in the first half of last year, said Dennis O'Mara, public health advisor of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga. where all cases of communicable diseases nationwide must be reported. O'Mara said the cases of measles reported have gone "up substantially from a year ago. It is definitely our recommendation that colleges follow the policy for proof of immunization." In Utah County, no cases of measles were reported in 1985, and only one has been reported in 1986, according to Gerda Haynie, nursing supervisor at the Utah County Health Department. In a 1984 survey by the American College Health Association of more than 1,000 colleges, 55 percent follow its recommendations for proof of immunization, while in 1983 only 17 percent complied. Even though BYU does not require proof of immunization for the general student population, selected groups of students are required to show proof of immunization or to get the proper vaccines. According to Marilyn Woodward, nurse practitioner in charge of the Immunization and Allergy Clinic at the McDonald Health Center, students in nursing, education and medical programs are required to be updated on all vaccinations, particularly the MMR (measles, mumps, rubella) vaccine. Because BYU has such a high population of foreign students and Americans returning from foreign countries, anyone returning from a high-risk area of tuberculosis is also required to undergo testing for the disease. This includes students from Canada and Indians previously living on reservations in high-risk areas. The majority of tuberculosis testing is held under tight control, according to Woodward. "These students must be immunized before they can even receive their activity cards," she said. Haynie recommends that students who do not have a record of having received the MMR vaccine from 1970 to the present need to have it repeated. "There is no danger in repeating the vaccine. It merely increases the number of antibodies for the disease," Haynie said. "I highly recommend students doing it for their own protection." "Students need to check their records, and if they haven't received the immunizations, they should make appointments now to do so, for their own protection as well as their roommates," she said.

Farming in danger, expert says

Only 2 percent of the American workforce producing food, the percent may find themselves should that percentage decrease. "We are losing the number of people and the expertise. Agriculture will not be survival of the fittest, we don't watch ourselves, we watch the Third World country, too," said R. Robison, director of the Utah Benson Agriculture and Forestry Institute. Robison was among experts recommended to serve on the U.S. National Advisory Commission. After going before a Senate subcommittee, Robison could begin work on a 15-member committee sometime in October or November, according to Susan Kirinich, Peace Corps relations manager. "The strength of the U.S. is the ability to feed ourselves," said Robison. "But agriculture is in serious decline in the U.S." "The percent of the people in the States are in agriculture, but we are leaving agriculture for financial reasons. Also, the United States is becoming an information management country and not producing agricultural products. While America is producing crops of information, other nations are producing crops of food — but no one seems to be eating. Robison cited a report from the Food and Agricultural Organization, a worldwide consortium of concerned persons with its headquarters in Rome, that indicated

LAREN R. ROBISON

Ethiopian grain was being stored when programs such as Live Aid were providing foodstuffs for the hungry. Did people fast and contribute for a hoax? Was Live Aid merely entertainment? According to the report, no. The Ethiopians needed food. The stored grain was being stored for export. Many Third World countries produce primarily to decrease the national debt and to make the wealthy wealthier, said Robison. Many Third World countries, like Ethiopia, attempt to take advantage of the tremendous European market, leaving its own population with little or no food. "Until we address the problem country by country and get them producing and get them to produce with a food-first philosophy, the problem will continue," said Robison. In most Third World countries, 3 percent of the people own 80 percent of the land. The benefits of the agricultural business goes to the landowners and the government. "Very little trickles down to the rural poor," said Robison. "The greatest unused resource is the people," said Robison.

Movies could prompt action

Studies debate suicide

By DONALD W. MEYERS

and the Associated Press

Two recent studies indicate that news reports and television movies trying to prevent suicide among young people may actually be driving some to take their own lives. The studies, conducted by Dr. Madelyn S. Gould of Columbia University and Dr. David P. Phillips of the University of California at San Diego, found television movies aimed at preventing teenage suicide and reports on the news, prompt some teenagers to take their lives. The reports were published in the New England Journal of Medicine. In Gould's study, it was reported that in the two weeks before three movies dealing with teenage suicide were aired, there were 14 suicide attempts among teenagers in the New York City area. After the movies aired, the figure increased to 22. There was no significant change in the figure after a fourth movie was shown. Phillips' study found the national suicide rate among teenagers went up 7 percent following 38 television news and feature stories about suicide. Even though some people agree with Gould's and Phillips' studies, the studies are not without their critics. Dr. James Murphy, of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta is one of them. "I think the important thing we have to do is to examine the relationship between those stories and individuals. We need to know whether a specific teenager watched the program and the effect that it had on him," said Murphy. Dr. Leon Eisenberg of the Harvard Medical School said it's unclear how the news and entertainment industry should handle suicide differently. "I don't think that we should not tell the public that the suicide rate is going up. That would be ridiculous, yet if this is right, that may be some sort of stimulus to people who are thinking about it. I don't know what the solution is," said Eisenberg. "Addressing the issue is much more important than ignoring it," said George Schweitzer, a spokesman for CBS, which aired two of the movies cited in the study. "There is no question that films like this on television are very, very, very positive. It's regrettable that studies like these can't measure the numbers of teenagers who sought help because they watched these programs. For us, that's the real story." Dr. Gawain Wells of the BYU Comprehensive Counseling Clinic agreed with the results of the survey. Adding from his own experience, Wells said, "As I have worked with adolescents, they have a fascination with it (suicide), and I could see how the movies are attracting them with the pathos and notoriety of it. "You can't identify through the data, but there may have been some who were prevented from committing suicide by the shows," Wells continued. Gould has admitted that "We don't know what proportion of suicides are due to imitation. I think it would be a relatively small proportion. I don't think any of these shows will take a healthy kid and all of a sudden motivate him to commit suicide."

France under attack, diplomat assassinated

UT, Lebanon (AP) — A lone gunman using a silenced rifle killed the French military attaché in Beirut outside the French Embassy. It was the latest of a series of attacks on French targets in Beirut. Anonymous telephone callers in Beirut and France claimed responsibility for the assassination in the French Embassy. Two obscure groups and individuals claimed further blows. One of the groups claimed the assassination of an alleged terrorist in France. Col. Christia Goutierre, a French military attaché, was killed in the assassination. He was shot in the head and chest at 8:30 a.m. and was about to enter the French Embassy when the gunman approached. Goutierre had parked his car outside the embassy's security zone, about 100 yards from the French building and is patrolled by French guards and Lebanese police. There was no immediate explanation for the assassination. Goutierre had been stationed in Beirut since October 1984. He was like most Western counsellors, moved its embassy to Christian East Beirut from the Moslem western Beirut years ago because of frequent kidnappings and bombings. France and Greece are the only countries that still have embassies in west Beirut. The first claim of responsibility for the assassination was by an anonymous telephone caller. A Western news agency in Beirut. He said the assassination was carried out on behalf of the Revenge and Justice Front, previously unknown. "Let (French Prime Minister Jacques) Chirac know our next blow will be more crippling," said the caller, who did not say what the group wanted. Later, a caller to a Western news agency office in Paris claimed the attaché had been killed by Anti-Imperialist International Brigades "revolutionaries." That group name was used previously in rocket and bombing attacks last May on the U.S., Japanese and Canadian embassies in Indonesia. The second caller threatened all French diplomats, French President Francois Mitterrand and Chirac, and demanded release of three comrades jailed in France, including George Ibrahim Abdallah, reputed leader of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Factions. Abdallah, a Christian from northern Lebanon, is serving a four-year sentence for possessing illegal weapons and false documents. Abdallah's release has also been demanded by those who claimed responsibility for a recent series of bombings in Paris. In addition, French peacekeeping soldiers in the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) have come under repeated attack in recent weeks, and seven Frenchmen still are missing after being abducted by gunmen in Beirut in the past two years. Groups that have claimed responsibility for the kidnappings have demanded, among other things, that France free Middle Eastern prisoners. Islamic Jihad, a Shiite Moslem group that claimed it kidnapped four of the Frenchmen, has said it killed one, but no body has been found.

Orem man invents new safety device

Industrial vehicles backing accidents may be outdated

By MICHAEL LEONARD
Universe Staff Writer

A life-saving device developed in Utah County for large industrial vehicles will be publicly demonstrated Saturday at 10:30 a.m. in the west parking lot of the BYU campus (across from Provo High). The Safety Braker, marketed by D-P Safety Braker, Inc., is designed to prevent accidents of large vehicles when backing. The device was invented by Gary Parson of Orem in response to last year's accident which killed a young boy riding a bicycle and involved a refuse truck. "I was surprised that there was nothing on the market to protect kids from backing vehicles," Parson said. "Because of the limited visibility behind large vehicles, a product was needed to stop a vehicle from backing onto or running over objects with its rear wheels and body of the vehicle," said Steven C. Davis of D-P Safety Braker, Inc. "Using a mechanical flap, air valves and electronic switches, the Safety Braker will, when activated, lock up the rear brakes within a fraction of a second," Davis said. The demonstration will involve brief speeches on safety from Mayor Blaine Willes of Orem, a representative of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, and possibly Mayor Joe Jenkins of Provo. Messages sent by Senator Orrin Hatch and Congressman Howard Nielsen will also be read. The safety device was first installed on an Orem city vehicle in July 1985. Orem now has its fleet of nine refuse trucks equipped with the device. Provo City has agreed to install the Safety Braker on its residential fleet of four refuse trucks. Laidlaw Waste Systems, Inc. in London, a private waste-collection company, will be installing the device on its Utah fleet of 23 trucks. Installation of the device will cost the company about $40,000 said Laidlaw District Manager Dick Zobel. "We have an obligation to the public to operate our trucks in the safest manner possible," Zobel said. "The Safety Braker gives us a safer, accident-free operation that is money-saving." Zobel said the device could have prevented an estimated 10 to 12 backing accidents in the past year. "The company plans to market nationally a controlled distribution of Safety Braker units to fill the need of a reliable backward-motion device for use on large vehicles," said Davis. BYU, Mountain Bell, Utah Power and Light, and companies in Texas, California and Canada are currently interested in the safety device.

This safety device, developed by an Orem man is designed to stop heavy vehicles in a fraction of a second and hopefully will prevent backing accidents.

Aquino pledges 'the sword of war'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Philippine President Corazon Aquino, in a speech that brought a shower of affection from a joint session of Congress, pledged Thursday to take up "the sword of war" if peacemaking with communist rebels fails.

Aquino, in the seventh month of her leadership of a major U.S. ally which was led for more than 20 years by Ferdinand Marcos, offered thanks for the role Congress played in changing U.S. policy toward her country.

At the same time, Aquino, widow of the assassinated Benigno Aquino, an opposition leader in the last years of Marcos, appealed for help to build "a new home for democracy, another haven for the oppressed."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said afterwards, "That's the finest speech I've heard in my 34 years in Congress."

Members of the House and Senate, many wearing yellow roses symbolizing the color Aquino chose for her presidential campaign, crowded the chamber. Scores of Filipino Americans were in the gallery crowd.

Within hours of her speech, the House passed 203-197 a bill giving the Philippines a $200 million cash infusion to help deal with economic distress.

Wilberg fire mine probe nears end

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — After nearly two years of investigation, federal officials will soon release their findings on the cause of a 1984 fire at the Wilberg Mine that claimed 27 lives.

Herschel Potter, chief investigator for the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration, said Thursday he planned to make an announcement within 10 days.

"It's moving slowly. We're still putting our investigation together, and still examining the equipment," he said. "But we believe that in the next week or 10 days, we'll make the call."

MSHA investigators have spent the past 22 months trying to unravel the riddle of what ignited the fire on Dec. 19, 1984, at the eastern Utah coal mine owned by Utah Power & Light Co.

Since early August, Potter's team has been examining and testing equipment retrieved from the area where the fire began. Of particular interest is a large air compressor which may have been operating the night of the fire.

Symposium pokes fun at presidents

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — How does a former president who was mimicked mercilessly for slipping and tripping get back at the comedian who made the most of the pratfalls?

Trip him back. That's just what Gerald Ford did Thursday, stretching a leg out in front of Chevy Chase, who made a name for himself imitating Ford on television's "Saturday Night Live."

The pair staged the gag before the start of the second day of events during a three-day Humor and the Presidency Symposium at the Gerald R. Ford Museum.

The symposium, which also included comic Mark Russell and several pundits and political operatives, is billed as a semi-serious look at the laughs generated by the nation's chief executives.

James Free, historian of Washington's Gridiron Club, opened some eyes with anecdotes about how presidents let down their hair when the conversations were off-the-record.

President Reagan once told the gathering he wasn't worried about the federal deficit, Free said.

"It's big enough to take care of itself," Free quoted the president as saying.

Alcohol habit more threat to women

CHICAGO (AP) — Female alcoholics who do not recover lose 15 years of their lives and have a mortality rate 4½ times that of other women, said a researcher who has reviewed recent findings on alcoholism.

"The important thing about all this is that women's problems with alcohol have not been sufficiently recognized . . . not by physicians or the public," said Dr. Sheila Blume, whose article is part of a series on alcoholism in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

Women who are arrested for driving drunk also are less likely than men to be offered treatment for alcoholism, Blume said.

Another article in the issue concluded that drivers who drink are two to four times more likely to suffer serious or fatal injuries in accidents, debunking the "extraordinary myth that drivers who drink are looser," and thus more likely to avoid injury, said Dr. George Lundberg, JAMA editor.

Reagan broadcast at UTC

President Ronald Reagan will present a message during the first nationwide community college teleconference to be broadcast at the Utah Technical College at Provo/Orem September 30.

The conference, entitled "Community college partnerships: the high school/community college connection," will be broadcast live from Washington, D.C.

"This important conference will focus on strengthening high school and community college partnerships and enhancing curriculum coordination efforts," said UTC President J. Marvin Higbee.

Reagan's broadcast message will regard the role of community colleges in the United States. Secretary of the U.S. Department of Labor William E. Brock will also address the conference. His speech is entitled, "Preparing tomorrow's workforce: the need for community college/high school partnerships."

The broadcast will be a two-way audio, one-way video production broadcast by satellite to 250 technical and junior colleges throughout the U.S. UTC will carry the conference at its Orem campus in room 318 of the Learning Resources Center from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The conference is open to the public free of charge.

It will also feature Dale Parnell, president of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges and author of the book "The Neglected Majority."

The conference will include the opportunity for participants to interact with presenters in Washington, D.C. through telephone links. Utah Technical College at Provo/Orem will also host a round-table discussion immediately following the teleconference to explore local high school and community college partnership opportunities.

UTC spokesman Gilbert Cook said one element of community college and high school cooperation involves concurrent enrollment for high school juniors and seniors. This is a program that allows students to attain college credit while still attending high school, thus reducing the time required to gain a post high school degree.

Cook said professors, administrators, and those associated with secondary education should find particular interest in the conference. Light refreshments will be served.

Secretary of State plans to demand Daniloff's release

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz will confront Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze head-on Friday with a demand to free American reporter Nicholas Daniloff, and is ready to cut short their summit planning session unless he gets a satisfactory reply, U.S. officials said.

In Moscow, however, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Thursday denounced the correspondent for U.S. News & World Report as a spy and suggested the United States had exploited the case to try to spoil super-power relations.

As tensions rose, the Soviets exchanged barbs with the Reagan administration Thursday over a U.S. order that 25 Soviet diplomats assigned to the United Nations leave the country by Oct. 1.

Shevardnadze, arriving at Andrews Air Force Base on the eve of the two-day meeting with Shultz, called the expulsion illegal and also "a bad decision."

In New York, the chief Soviet U.N. delegate, Alexander Belonogov, said the Soviets already had cut their mission to 208, which is 10 below the demanded level.

BYU professor becomes AMS president

A BYU professor of information management, Harold T. Smith, has been chosen as the international president of the Administrative Management Society for 1986-87.

Smith was elected by the organization's board of directors and installed at the 67th international conference in Boston last June.

AMS is a professional management association headquartered in Willow Grove, Pa., with more than 9,200 members in 140 chapters.

According to Smith, the goal of the AMS is to "serve managers and other professionals by providing information and educational materials to help them be more effective."

Smith has recently completed work on a five-year plan to guide the AMS into new growth and vitality. His projects have included new membership materials, a monthly newsletter and a series of videos focusing on career development.

Active in AMS since 1964, Smith is a past president and officer in the Salt Lake City chapter and has served extensively at the international level.

He has consulted with a number of corporations, including General Mills, 3M and Kennecott Copper on issues of administration and information management.

Smith has taught at BYU since 1963 and has served as chairman of the Business Education department and director of the Administrative Management program. He is now director of the university's Information Management program.

Smith is the author of more than 80 articles published in professional journals and has also penned the books, "The Administrative Manager," and "Automated Office Systems Manager."

He has conducted seminars on office automation for the U.S. Office of Personnel Management in Germany and the Institute of Administration Management in Great Britain.

Smith is a recipient of the AMS Merit, Diamond Merit and 300 Club awards, the Certified Administrative Management designation and the AMS Foundation's Olsten Corporation grant for a study that produced a book, "The Office Revolution."

Book of Mormon serves as 'judgement bar'

Senior Staff Writer

Students who anticipate final exams at the end of the semester, will find a final look forward to.

The Book of Mormon (Another Testament for Jesus Christ) serves as a final examination," said Dr. John Welch, professor of law at BYU's J. Reuben Clark Law School, during a presentation given in anticipation of the dedication of the Provo Tabernacle on Wednesday.

Addressing the topic, "The Book of Mormon and what it means to us as a people," Welch admonished people to study and teach the book, "for by it we will be judged.

"We'll see this book again, at the judgement bar of God," he said.

Welch discussed seven main topics regarding the importance of the Book of Mormon to members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Spiritual tutor

The Book of Mormon functions for us as a spiritual tutor. "It is with the Book of Mormon that we cut our spiritual teeth. We can know the book is true without knowing everything it contains."

Welch cited how the book serves as a fountain of wisdom. It is a source of great teaching and understanding. "The doctrines are profound and crystal clear. They provide a continuing flow of understanding for us," he said.

The Book of Mormon also serves as a sign of the restoration of the gospel. "It is one of the intellectual wonders of the world. We do not have to prove the Book of Mormon; it is its own proof."

Credible witness

Welch discussed that the book is a witness for Jesus Christ. As a lawyer, Welch noted main characteristics that constitute a credible witness. Being consistent, straightforward, direct and logical make up a credible witness, according to Welch, and the Book of Mormon contains all of these characteristics.

The book also serves as a key to our earthly covenants. "It teaches us faith and that God remembers the covenants He has made with his people," said Welch.

For many, the book serves as a divine comforter, he said. "The Lord remembers every creature of His creating and every covenant he has made. It is a great reassurance to know that every rising generation can be taught the gospel."

Welch emphasized that the Book of Mormon serves as our final examination. "The Book of Mormon is to speak to us from the dust, but not the dust of our bookshelves. We must read it, teach it, understand it and love it."

OTC honors unaccounted POW/MIA's

In accordance with President Reagan's declaration of Sept. 19 as the annual National POW/MIA Day, the Air Force ROTC will recognize soldiers who are prisoners of war and are missing in action today at 10 a.m.

The observance, which will take place on the quad, south of the Abrahamson Administration Building, will involve 170 Air Force cadets and honor all POWs and MIAs still unaccounted for in Vietnam.

Special guest speakers will include Lt. Col. Jay Hess, a former Vietnam POW of six years, and Pearl Rex, assistant state coordinator of the League of Families, an organization supporting families of those still missing in action.

Col. Gary K. Spencer, chairman of Aerospace Studies at BYU, will conduct today's services.

Students and members of the public are encouraged to attend.

Your BASIC solution:

Introducing BASICALC.™ The new Texas Instruments programmable calculator.

Now there's a programmable scientific calculator that solves even the most complex math, engineering and science problems in a BASIC way. The TI-74 BASICALC.

Unlike most other programmable calculators that require you to learn a new, complicated system of key-stroke commands—in effect, a new programming language—the TI-74 BASICALC allows you to use the BASIC language programming you already know.

But don't let the BASICALC's ease of operation fool you. It also has more calculating power than comparably-priced programmables.

Your basic specs:

- Operates as a calculator or BASIC computer
- 8K RAM expandable to 16K RAM
- 70 built-in scientific functions
- Optional software cartridges for mathematics and statistics
- Optional PASCAL language cartridge
- Optional printer and cassette interface

And a variety of options, like software cartridges, are available that make it even more powerful and convenient.

Stop by and see the TI-74 BASICALC for yourself. In basic terms, what it really offers you is a bargain.

Library fixes BYLINE

By LORIE FUNK
Universe Staff Writer

The BYLINE terminals located in the Harold B. Lee Library are now ready to serve the needs of the students searching for library materials in any of BYU's campus libraries and the Salt Lake Center.

"Although the terminals have been in the library for a year, we finally feel the system is really reliable," said Sterling Albrecht, university librarian. "We also have more terminals on every floor of the library and at on-campus housing, which is a convenience to students."

The integrated library computer system BYLINE (Brigham Young Libraries Information Network) enables library users to look up items by simply entering an author's name, book title or subject heading.

Patrons will then see all the information on a traditional catalog card, plus whether or not the book is checked out. The screen will also indicate if the book is on order.

"Up until now this process would take a considerably more amount of time. But with BYLINE, a book can be found quickly and easily," said Albrecht.

"I have worked with both the card catalog and BYLINE, and I think BYLINE is a much better system," said Linda Anderson, a senior in international relations from St. Paul,

Minn. "It is much easier to tell if this subject is what you're looking for."

Mike Staheli, an economics/Asian studies senior from Pocatello, Idaho, had a different opinion. "I was a research assistant this summer, so I used BYLINE all the time."

It would save time when it worked, which was about half the time. It didn't take me long to go straight to the card catalog and not even go to BYLINE."

Albrecht says he feels confident that the system has been improved since then.

Most books added to the HBL library since 1978 are included in the computer. Books acquired before that time will still be referenced in the card catalog.

"My only complaint about these computers is that I think they should have all the books in the computer instead of just the most recently added ones," said William Oborn, a senior in near eastern studies from Walnut Creek, Calif.

Albrecht commented that although a more complete reference system could be established, it would cost a great deal of money.

BYLINE is also accessed from the home or office personal computer through the campus cable system or by telephone. Brochures explaining search techniques and how to access the system are available at information desks in all campus libraries.

Sexual identities becoming confused

By BARBIE BAWGUS
Universe Staff Writer

Eight-year old Johnny and his mom live in a small, two-bedroom house.

He likes to sew, arrange flowers, and is a member of the community ballet company. He'd rather bake a good apple-strudel, than play football with the guys.

Johnny — although not real — is not alone in his atypical role of the "all-American male."

Who's to blame, Johnny, or mommy? And, if so, what for?

Sex role development, the process whereby children come to acquire, value and adopt behavior patterns for their ascribed gender, will be the topic of discussion on Friday 7:30 p.m. in the Wilkinson Center Ballroom.

The lecture, given by Dr. Clyde C. Robinson, professor of early childhood education at BYU-Hawaii Campus, includes issues such as biological factors, the role of parents, and the child's own cognitive development.

"Every society has its own set of norms on how people ought to behave, and sex roles vary from society to society," Robinson said.

"The popular view is that of the passive child being acted upon," said Robinson.

"The environment, parents, T.V., and peers are often blamed. But children are not passive, they take an active role in their development."

As early as age 3, children develop a preference for a certain behavior.

Robinson said that a child showing a preference in a certain type of toy or behavior indicates that the child is playing an active role in his/her role development.

"Young children become very efficient in recognizing things that are for them and not for them," he said, "but girls don't have to just like dolls, and boys don't have to just like trucks."

"As children get older, they figure out that age changes, not gender. That becomes very important to them," said Robinson.

"And once they figure that out, they start to model themselves after certain things, he said, "but it doesn't mean that boys raised in a one-parent home will adopt their mother's or father's attitudes."

Robinson also said that stereotypes break down as the child gets older.

"People want to say that we're genetically determined or environmentally controlled, but all of those factors, when combined, have an impact," Robinson said.

The hardest component of all, is to figure out the role that genes actually do play, other than the physical differences.

"Figuring out differences in fat composition and widening of the hips are easy, but behaviors are another story," he said.

He also said that parents unconsciously encourage their children to behave a certain way, such as rewarding girls who show emotion, and rewarding boys who don't.

Young Ambassadors change style, more acting involved in upcoming tours in the U.S.

By MARK C. SHERWOOD
Universe Staff Writer

There are some big changes in store for audiences of the Young Ambassadors this year that could bring either criticism or applause of approval.

Mark Huffman, artistic director for the Young Ambassadors said they were pleased with the response from the traditional Young Ambassadors shows.

"We would take people on a musical journey through American history, and with the medium of music, express a joy for life," he said.

In the traditional shows a kaleidoscope of bright lights and color formed a montage for the international audiences to soak up. The finale would be the clincher to tell why the Young Ambassadors spread good will throughout the world.

This year, however, the group will be heading out on a national tour with a different perspective in mind. "With a U.S. tour, the ideas we express have to be more subtle, at the same time keeping the far-reaching effect. By selectively choosing show material conveying those natural feelings of love, understanding and a reason of purpose, we feel we can be successful," said Huffman.

The theme for this year's show entitled "Our Time," emphasizes that we choose what we make of. In the fashion of a Broadway show utilizes a script, combining the traditional singing and dancing with new addition of acting.

Free Tabernacle concert tonight 'noted' musicians to perform works

Noted members of the BYU music faculty and Provo music community will perform tonight in an evening of classical music at Provo Tabernacle.

The free concert, which will begin at 7 p.m., is part of the week-long rededication activities at the newly refurbished 103-year-old structure.

Performing on the program will be a piano quartet consisting of Douglas Humphries, Mack Wilberg, Paul Pollei and Ron Staheli in a piano quartet. Also featured will be child protegee, Janae Codner, performing on the piano.

Codner most recently won the Utah State Fair piano competition in the junior high school category. She is only eight years old and has performed locally with the Utah Valley Symphony, the Utah Symphony. She has also received a first-place award in a recent national piano competition. She will perform a movement from a Mozart piano concerto.

The BYU University Singers, under the direction of Ron Staheli, will also perform two numbers during the evening.

Husband and wife duo David and Donna Dalton will perform several original compositions for viola and voice, which were arranged for them by Merrill Bradshaw, a BYU music faculty member.

Julie and Bret Zumsteg will also perform on the cello and organ respectively.

BYU piano faculty member, Mona A. Smith, who has organized the event, called the evening's program "a wonderful musical evening — a musical bash... a tribute from area musicians to the tabernacle."

Rededication services for the tabernacle will take place Sunday, Sept. 21. President Ezra Taft Benson, president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, will offer the dedicatory prayer and address the congregation. Admission to Sunday's dedicatory service is by invitation only.

Service good for undecided young people

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) Young people undecided about what career to choose should serve at least one hitch in any branch of the armed forces, suggests Margeret "Pidge" Nelson, who put in 21 years in the U.S. Navy before retiring in 1964.

"If they can't make up their minds about what they want to be, they should try service life," says the 69-year-old Nelson, who served in military installations in the United States and Europe before ending her navy career as a yeoman 2nd class.

She also recommends the discipline associated with military life. "The service can do things parents can't do. They (recruits) have to get their hair cut, put their clothes away and they won't shuffle any more," explained Nelson, who still walks in a brisk military manner.

The Brooklyn, N.Y., native joined the navy in 1943, following in her father's footsteps.

He was a fireman aboard the battleship New Jersey in World War I when it fought in the battle of Scapa Flow off Scotland, she said.

Cougars venture into Husky territory

WM CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

BYU-Washington game gets heated daily, even though the teams will only meet for the second time Saturday.

"It was an embarrassment," said Ludwig, sports editor for the Daily. "BYU is not well liked. The game is more important than the Washington State."

The Huskies pounded Ohio State last Saturday, which propelled the battle gridders past BYU to the top spot in the Associated Press weekly poll. BYU escaped with a 17-10 win over New Mexico and moved from No. 9 to No. 13 in United Press International.

Washington coach Don James played down the No. 7 ranking and wants to avoid a letdown on the part of his players.

"There is no way we are the seventh best team in the nation," he said. "I'm not sure you can tell how good we are in one week."

Head Coach LaVell Edwards sees the game will be a battle. "We should matchup well," he said. "I expect it to be a very physical, hard fought and well played game."

Washington was able to get a big win on Ohio State because of turnovers on a rainy day.

"We need to turn off turnovers," Edwards, referring to BYU, said after the ball six times against New Mexico.

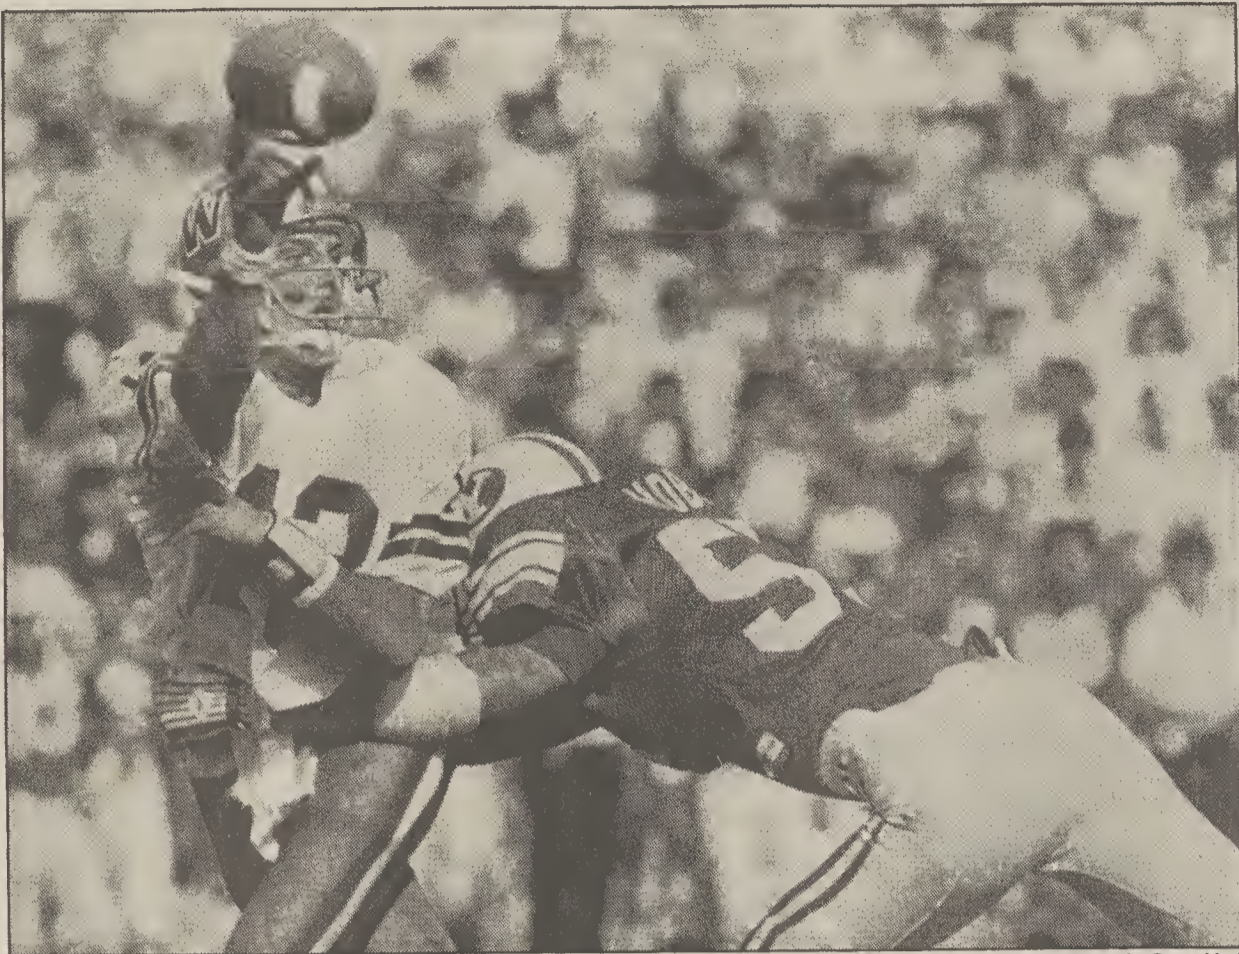

The attitude around this rivalry between the Cougars and the Huskies has been battling for years.

"They aren't looking past us for anything," said Edwards. "I think we are a better team because they are a better quarterback."

Quarterback Chris Chandler led for 204 yards and two touchdowns last week for the Huskies. Washington is balanced on offense as it gained 204 yards rushing.

Along with the scare last week, the Huskies have confidence in the ability of their quarterback Steve Lattin, who has passed for 730 yards and five touchdowns so far this season.

"They really came together against New Mexico," said BYU runningback Steve Lattin.

The Cougars hope to have the same success against Washington as they had last year in a 31-3 win. This picture shows linebacker Richard Hobbs about to hurry Husky quarterback.

Lakei Heimuli who scored the winning touchdown against New Mexico. "There was no doubt that we could score."

If the game comes down to the kicking game both BYU and Washington could win the game from inside the 50. Jeff Jaegar of Washington is close to the NCAA field goal record set by John Lee of UCLA. BYU will rely on the leg of Leonard Chitty, who booted a 49-yard field goal against Utah State.

Defensively, the Huskies held the Buckeyes to 186 total yards on offense. BYU gave up 302 yards to New Mexico's run-and-shoot offense after holding Utah State to 73 yards the week before.

"Those two (Jason Buck and Shawn Knight) on the defensive line are a concern," said James who will need to establish the run to keep BYU's offense off the field.

The first non-field confrontation between BYU and Washington was media built at the close of BYU's 1984 national championship season.

BYU had sewn up its undefeated season earlier in December with a 24-17 Holiday Bowl win over Michigan, the Cougar hopeful waited to see what third-ranked Washington and second-ranked Oklahoma would do in the Orange Bowl.

The Huskies pounded the Sooners 28-17 in an upset. When the final polls came out BYU was No. 1 and Washington No. 2. Many collegiate football fans thought it should have been reversed.

Tickets at the 59,800 seat 67-year-old Husky stadium have been sold out for weeks.

BYU students for $4 can view the game live at the Marriott Center Saturday at 2 p.m. Tickets are available at the ticket office.

North Colorado at Colorado State

Neither Buxton or Christensen know much about CSU's opponent. The two editors say Colorado State should get a win.

UCLA at San Diego State

SDSU got a big win against Utah last Saturday, but both editors predict the Bruins will have an easy time with the WAC school.

Alabama at Florida

Christensen says the Tide will improve its record to 4-0 with an important 21-10 win over the Gators.

Buxton goes with Florida by a field goal.

Southern California at Baylor

The Trojans look strong to Christensen and he says they will get out of Waco, Texas with a 21-17 win.

Buxton can't see Baylor beating USC.

SMU at Arizona State

Nobody knows a lot about SMU, because the Mustangs are on probation. Christensen says that will work to their advantage. Buxton disagrees and goes with Sun Devils by 14.

Last week Christensen was right on seven of eight games. Buxton got six of eight.

Overall the records are Christensen (19-22 .86) and Buxton (15-22 .68).

AP predicts Husky win, Sports editors disagree

Associated Press has picked Washington to drop BYU 27-17 Saturday afternoon at Husky Stadium in Seattle. The wire service says Washington "is not the same team that was manhandled by 31-3 last year."

Sports Editor Tom Christensen goes against AP and says BYU will edge the Huskies 30-24.

Assistant Sports Editor Dave Buxton says BYU learned from its turnovers against New Mexico and will win in a squeaker 27-24.

Air Force at Wyoming

Air Force is 2-0 in the WAC and will be favored against the Cowboys. But it is always tough to play in Laramie, Wyo. According to Christensen, the Falcons will go to 3-0 in the WAC with a 21-17 triumph.

Buxton isn't impressed with Air Force and sides with Wyoming 24-21.

UTEP at Hawaii

UTEP may be improving, but Christensen says Hawaii showed it is a good team when it defeated Wisconsin and will down the Miners 24-14.

Buxton gives Hawaii the home edge.

Texas Tech at New Mexico

The Lobos finally get a home game and Christensen predicts the Lobos will thump the Red Raiders.

Buxton agrees.

Injuries have plagued BYU thus far this fall, as key players may miss Saturday's match with Cal-San Luis Obispo at Haws Field.

The Soccercat injury report resembles that of a football team. Casualties in the line-up include junior Mike Bodon, still hampered with a nerve problem, Randy Russo with possible torn ligaments in the ankle, and Joseph Ngassa with sore ribs.

Although the Cougars are ailing, Coach Jim Dusara says his team will be ready to take the field against the Mustangs in their first meeting ever.

Dusara made some strategic changes in hopes to give his offensive attack a boost. Senior co-captain Corey Findlay has been moved up from defense to the midfield to add some scoring punch.

The Cougars take on Cal-Poly at 4 p.m. Saturday at Haws Field. There is no admission charge.

BYU's receiving Linis

The Fabulous Flying 'Linis, Mark Bel and Trevor Mo, enter this week's football game against Washington as the leading receivers for BYU with almost 300 yards between them.

Mark Bellini, a senior from San Leandro, Calif., came to BYU as a walk-on and impressed the coaches so much they let him travel with the team and see varsity action his freshman year. One reason he was not recruited by major colleges is because Bellini was a small runningback in high school.

As a junior last year, Bellini gained 1,008 yards receiving with 63 catches and 14 touchdowns. In the two games played so far this season, Bellini has 11 catches for 178 yards and two touchdowns.

Bellini entered this year as an All-American candidate. At the end of the 1985 season, he was named a first team All-WAC selection, a second team United Press International All-American, and third team Associated Press All-American.

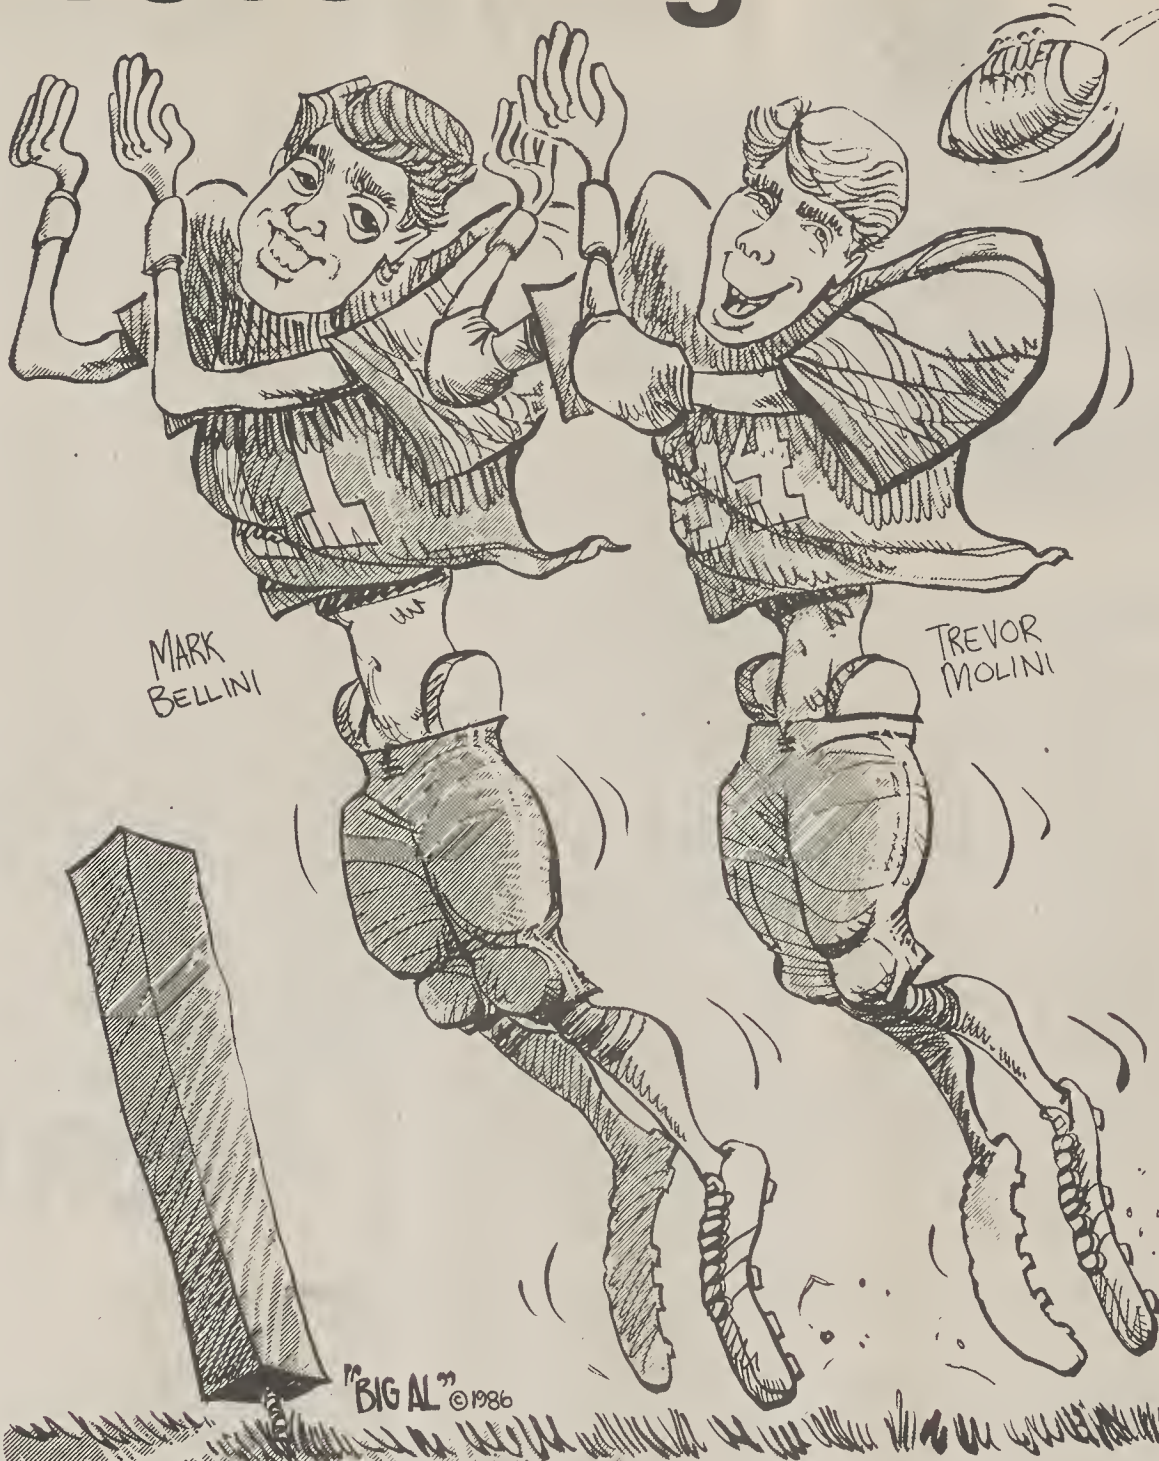

Despite the fact BYU has dominated the offensive limelight in recent years with passing records so numerous that statistical categories were actually created to keep track of them, BYU has never laid claim to an All-American wide receiver. Bellini may become the first.

Trevor Molini, while attracting somewhat less media attention than Bellini, has nevertheless racked up some impressive statistics of his own, starting in high school.

Molini was an all-state tight end his senior year of high school in Reno, Nev., and was also an honorable mention All-American, not only in football, but also as a track standout.

Coming out of high school, Molini was recruited for his gridiron abilities by major football schools like USC, UCLA, ASU, Notre Dame and Penn State.

Although only a sophomore in 1985, Molini had 849 yards receiving and was an All-WAC, third team Football News All-American, and UPI and AP honorable mention All-American.

Clemens' pitching puts Sox on top

BOSTON (AP) — One year ago, with young prospect Roger Clemens recovering from shoulder surgery, the Boston Red Sox were en route to a fifth-place finish in the American League East, 18 1/2 games behind champion Toronto.

Now, with Clemens healthy and no longer a prospect, the Red Sox are riding the big right-hander's blazing fastball to their first division championship since 1975.

"He's the best pitcher in the league, maybe the best in baseball," Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger said

Tuesday night after Clemens defeated the Brewers 2-1 for his 23rd victory of the season, tops in the major leagues.

In 30 starts, the 24-year-old Texan has a 23-4 record for a winning percentage of .852.

He also leads the league with 227 strikeouts and a 2.56 earned run average.

"You can't have a losing streak with a guy like that," Bamberger said.

The Red Sox agree. Clemens has won 13 games following contests in which Boston has lost. He has failed to win after a loss only twice.

"These guys are counting on me and I'm supposed to help the club win, stop losing streaks," Clemens said. "I don't like having to stop losing streaks, but I know they have to be stopped."

Clemens also looks at his job as a personal challenge if he starts after the Red Sox have lost a game.

"I pitch better when I've got something challenging me," he said.

"If something presents itself that is a little bit tougher, then I like that."

With a fastball approaching 95 mph, Clemens, nicknamed "The Rocket," scattered six hits, struck out 10 and walked only one in beating the Brewers Wednesday.

Clemens became Boston's first 23-game winner since Mel Parnell won 25 and Ellis Kinder 23 in 1949, when the Red Sox were beaten for the AL pennant on the final day of the season by the New York Yankees.

He also tied the club record, set by Jim Lonborg in 1967, by striking out 10 or more batters for the eighth time this season. He has done that 12 times in his brief career.

Duplicate fees to increase for hunters

DOUGLAS NIELSEN
Senior Outdoor Writer

Changes of duplicate license laws have led to an added fee for duplicate licenses, according to the Central Utah Regional office of the Division of Wildlife Resources.

The price increase is due to abuse by some hunters of the opportunity to buy duplicate licenses," said Laura John, a secretary for the DWR. At the beginning of the 1986 deer hunting season, a duplicate hunting license will cost the hunter 75 percent of the cost of the original license. In the past, the cost of the duplicate license was 50 percent of the original cost.

One scenario she gave was of a hunter who shoots one animal and then comes into the office to report the loss of his license. He then buys a duplicate license and returns to the field and shoots another deer. This, of course, is against the law.

Duplicate licenses may be purchased if a person loses his original license. This law was passed so that hunters who have legitimately lost their licenses can replace them. Without this law, hunters would lose the money they paid for the licenses as well as the chance to hunt.

To purchase a duplicate license, the owner of the lost license needs to know when and where the original license was purchased and the license number, if possible.

This information must be given to the Division of Wildlife official at the time the duplicate license is purchased.

Duplicate licenses may be purchased at the Central Utah Regional office of the DWR at 1115 N. Main in Springville.

Andersen brings three freshmen to camp

LADDELL ANDERSEN
Senior Sports Writer

Although the competition to recruit high school athletes is fierce, BYU's basketball program continues to attract quality players.

This year's recruits include a point guard from California and two local high school players.

Among the Cougar backcourt is 6-foot-6 Nathan Call from Capistrano High School in California.

This year, Call averaged 13.8 points-per-game while leading his team to a league championship. He also led his conference in assists.

However, his talents are not exclusive to basketball. Besides being selected All-CIF in basketball, he was also named All-CIF in football and baseball.

In fact, Call is the only athlete in the history of Orange County's North-South all-star series chosen to the all-star squads in each of the three sports.

During his senior year, Call played wide receiver on the football team. During baseball season he played left field and had an impressive batting average of .438.

The First-Interstate Bank-Amateur Athletic Foundation chose Call as Southern California Prep Athlete of the Year.

Winning this award places Call among some talented athletes. Other winners include former BYU basketball player Steve Craig, current BYU basketball player Mike Smith, and Denver Broncos' quarterback John Elway.

Why did a talented athlete like Call choose BYU?

Ladell Andersen, head coach of the BYU men's basketball team, believes the pull of the university, the basketball tradition and the attitude towards LDS church missions brought Call to Provo.

"He gets the ball to the open person and that is what attracted me the most to him," said Andersen.

Also joining Call on this year's squad is David Reeves a 6-foot-3 athlete from Timpview High School in Provo.

During Reeves' senior year he averaged 22.3 points-per-game along with 11.5 rebounds-per-game.

"He is a deadly shooter from a decent range," said Andersen concerning Reeves' offensive abilities.

The other local player is Todd Gentry from Mountain View High School in Orem.

As a senior he averaged 19.0 points-per-game.

"He has nice moves around the basket," said Andersen.

Legislator wants blind to hunt deer but not to shoot

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Legislation to allow the blind to obtain deer-hunting licenses has been reported out of committee with a favorable recommendation.

Rep. Ray Nielsen, R-Fairview, said the bill would not result in blind people shooting guns, but would allow a blind person to go along on a hunt and have a sighted person shoot a deer for him.

The bill was reported out by the joint Energy, Natural Resources and Agriculture Interim Committee Wednesday and will go before the Legislature at its 1987 session.

Nielsen proposed the bill at the urging of a constituent who liked to go along on hunts but felt he was not a fully contributing member without a deer tag. Nielsen said it is also an economic issue for many blind people.

Provo Police will be fingerprinting misdemeanor offenders, such as shoplifters and marijuana possessors, within a few weeks.

Culprits to leave fingerprints

By KRISTEN K. ROPER
Universe Staff Writer

Provo Police will implement a fingerprinting program in the next couple of weeks designed to more efficiently keep track of misdemeanor offenders such as shoplifters and marijuana possessors.

Police officers will be able to issue a citation and take a fingerprint at the location of the investigation. "This will help the state keep track of repeat offenders," said Lt. Paul Marking of the Provo Police Department.

The officers will use a special inkless ink pad from a kit provided by the state to put an index fingerprint on a sticker. The sticker is then applied to the citation and sent to the state.

The offender will be required to appear in court at a later, more convenient time. If convicted, a file will be maintained on certain offenses. Those files will go into a computer for all of the criminal justice system to draw on.

The Utah Bureau of Criminal Identification has been working in conjunction with Sandy City and West Valley Police Departments to develop the program.

Their objectives were to reduce jail transportation time and to allow the criminal justice system to properly deal with repeat offenders.

Police administrators also expect the program to serve as a crime prevention tool. They believe some of the regular offenders will curtail criminal activity once they know past offenses will show up on a court computer.

The new procedure will increase a police officer's efficiency by cutting time spent on individual arrests.

Good and bad news, says professor

Family life: structure down, quality up

By KRISTEN K. ROPER
Universe Staff Writer
and the Associated Press

The American family is getting better and worse, according to a BYU professor.

J. Joel Moss, professor of family sciences, said the structure of the family is breaking down but the quality is better because people are willing to work harder on their relationships.

"The traditional nuclear family with a father who goes to work and a mother who stays home with the children is breaking down to a variety of types. In a world of increasing family types, defining a 'good' family is increasingly difficult," Moss said.

Family types
The different family types include single parent homes, families with stepparents, two or more single parent families living together, and families with both parents working.

Eugene Mead, coordinator of BYU's Marriage and Family Therapy Clinic, said he believes the family is changing, but he doesn't see the traditional family type totally disappearing.

"People like families and want to be in families. We need to learn new skills to learn how to survive in the new kinds of families," Mead said.

Two incomes
Last week at the 7th Annual Families Alive Conferences at Weber State College, Dr. Alvin Poussaint of Harvard Medical School told the audience the family structure was breaking down, but not because of women working outside the home. Poussaint said families now need two incomes to survive.

Moss said yes and no to Poussaint's opinion. "Some families need both parents to work because it does cost more now to raise a family." However, some people believe they have to have more to be happy.

"The line between what's needed and what's believed to be needed is very hard to draw," Moss said.

Traditions questioned
The world emphasizes individualism and that can be both good and bad for relationships, Moss said. "People have begun to question the traditional guidelines and rules for marriage. The chance for quality relationships is there because people build around individuals not rules," Moss said.

However, some people don't know how to do that and end up trying again and again, he added.

Mead said there is a tendency for personal self-fulfillment to override everything else. "We need to be willing to work for the good of the family," Mead said.

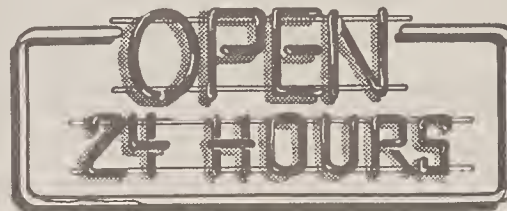

He suggests families be more open and be "our brother's keeper," or the weaker members of the family will suffer.

"It's dangerous to be too closed, too secretive. We shouldn't have the attitude, 'no one should know what's going on in my family,'" Mead said.

The Marriage and Family Therapy Clinic trains students to become therapists in two-year master's and four-year doctorate programs. The clinic is located in the John Taylor Building on 900 East, across from the J. Reuben Clark Law School.

It is a training clinic and member of the community and BYU students and faculty are helped by students.

"We help people with troubled marriages, depression, sexual problems and we also do divorce counseling," Mead said.

UVRMC impresses Chinese

If Utah Valley Regional Medical Center were to relocate and end up in the People's Republic of China, it would be one of the finest and best equipped medical facilities in that nation of one billion people.

That was the message expressed during a recent visit to UVRMC by Zhou Hui Min, a pathologist, and his wife Shi Zhen Rong, an ophthalmologist from the city of Ching-dao in the People's Republic of China.

"Although our hospital in Ching-dao is a teaching hospital, it is not as well equipped as your hospital here in Provo," Min said. "We have almost all the same equipment as you have, but not so much of it. Yours seems to be more efficient. More convenient for the patient."

Min and his wife were in Provo to visit their daughter, a student at BYU. Another daughter was attending BYU but recently transferred to the University of Arizona.

Min and Rong both teach and work at the Ching-dao Medical College, which is a 700-bed hospital in their home city of one million people. It is one of three teaching hospitals affiliated with the city's college.

During their four to six month stay in the United States, Min and Rong plan to touring every medical facility they can. They will also attend a conference on leprosy, a bacterial disease, in Louisiana.

One of the most interesting aspects of the couple's trip has been their visits to physicians' clinics, Min said.

"It is hard to believe that one doctor has so much equipment that is available to him to use," Min said. "We don't have doctors who have so much equipment. We have maybe this much equipment for 20 doctors to use in a hospital."

Despite the heavy burden placed on his nation by its vast population there are still enough doctors and nurses to go around, Min said. He added he would like to see more extensive training of those doctors and nurses.

"We have adequate numbers of doctors and nurses," Min said. "I think, though that the emphasis should not be on the quantity, but instead should be on the quality. I think doctors and nurses in any nation should be better trained."

In China a student enters medical school directly upon high school graduation, according to Min. They then spend anywhere from five to eight years in training, depending on the discipline they are assigned or choose.

"I don't think the competition to get into our medical schools is as intense or competitive as yours," Min said. "They do not have to have the bachelor's degree first, as in your country. Their schooling is almost free, because it is paid by the government. And they do not graduate until they have proven themselves and are ready to perform."
